Home Inventory

We encourage all of our citizens to use this helpful document to record your personal property. In the event of a natural disaster or crime it can be difficult to recall what property you own, its age, value or identifying numbers. This information is important to have not only for insurance purposes, but also for law enforcement. If your property is stolen, law enforcement can enter the item into a national database for stolen property. Serial numbers or other identifying numbers are instrumental in the recovery of property after a crime is committed. This record, once completed should be stored in a safe deposit box, with a trusted friend or relative, or in a fireproof container. We suggest you keep an electronic copy as well; take a picture with your phone or email a copy to yourself.

This task can be time consuming and at times, overwhelming. We encourage you to take the time to complete it so you will have an accurate record of your property and if needed you can provide it to law enforcement or your insurance company. We will always be looking out for you!
